The Week

EVERY NIGHT, BEFORE BED · ABOUT TEN MINUTES

1 Empty the sink
Completely. Dishwasher or washed.

2 Wipe the counters
And the table you eat at.

3 One lap
Put back anything not where it lives.

This is the anchor. Ten minutes tonight lets you run your week half-asleep. Skip it for four days, and tomorrow morning turns into an emergency cleanup project.

DAY	THE ONE JOB, ON TOP OF THE NIGHTLY TEN MINUTES
Monday	Floors Sweep, vacuum or mop. Dust what needs it — blinds, mirrors, shelves. Include the entry and stairs.
Tuesday	Laundry, start to finish Wash, dry, fold, and put it away the same day. Folded and left in the basket doesn't count.
Wednesday	Bedroom and the main bathroom Floors, surfaces, mirror, toilet, sink, tub. Check whether the windows need doing.
Thursday	The kitchen, properly Appliances, cabinet fronts, and clear the old food out of the fridge. Wipe the shelves while it's empty.
Friday	Nothing extra. Just the nightly ten.
Saturday	The other bathroom, and the car Second bathroom top to bottom. Sweep the garage. Clear out the car and the trunk.
Sunday	Nothing extra. Just the nightly ten.

IF YOU ONLY DO ONE THING
Empty the sink before bed.

Swap days whenever life gets in the way. Just get all five jobs done before Sunday night. You pick the day—just don't skip the finish line.

Before any of this works, the place has to start at zero once — everything with a home, nothing left to deal with later. Then this keeps it there.
