MR. LIFE MANAGER · WORKSHEET

The Household Agreement

Decide it once, together, before it's a problem.

> WHY WRITING IT DOWN WORKS
>
> An unwritten expectation gets renegotiated every single time. A written one was decided once. That's the entire trick — you're not being bureaucratic, you're closin... a decision so it stops costing you.

01 Who lives here

NAME

NAME

DATE AGREED

02 Who owns what

Not "we'll both do the kitchen." One name per line. Owning a job means noticing it needs doing, doing it, and knowing when supplies run out — not just the visible part.

JOB	OWNER	HOW OFTEN
Dishes
Kitchen counters & stove
Trash & recycling out
Bathroom
Floors — vacuum & mop
Shared-space cleanup
Buying shared supplies
Fridge clear-out
Dealing with the landlord

FILLED EXAMPLE

Dishes	Sam — same night, before bed
Trash & recycling	Alex — out Tuesday, and buys the bags
Bathroom	Alternate weeks — Sam odd, Alex even

03 The invisible work

This is the part that gets skipped, and it's the part people actually resent. Someone is already doing all of it. Name them.

THE JOB NOBODY COUNTS	OWNER
Noticing we're out of something
Actually paying the bills on time
Scheduling repairs, chasing the landlord
Knowing what's in the fridge
Remembering when rent is due
Being the one who says something when it slips

WHY THIS SECTION EXISTS

Noticing is work. Tracking is work. Being the person who has to bring it up is especially work. If one person is doing all of it, they're carrying a second job nobod... has acknowledged — and that's what turns into a fight about dishes that isn't really

04 What "clean enough" means

People have wildly different defaults and assume theirs is normal. Agree on the floor, not the ideal.

KITCHEN AT THE END OF A NIGHT SHOULD LOOK LIKE...

SHARED SPACES ON A NORMAL WEEKDAY SHOULD LOOK LIKE...

THINGS WE'VE AGREED WE GENUINELY DON'T CARE ABOUT

YOUR OWN ROOM: ANYTHING GOES, OR ARE THERE LIMITS?

05 Money

The two things that cause trouble: who actually pays the company, and what counts as shared.

BILL	IN WHOSE NAME	SPLIT HOW	DUE
Rent
Electric
Gas
Internet
Water / trash

SHARED SUPPLIES WE SPLIT

HOW WE SETTLE UP, AND WHEN

> THE ONE THAT BITES
>
> Whoever's name is on the bill takes the credit hit if it's late — no matter who owed what. Put it on autopay from an account that's actually funded, and settle up… separately.

06 Living together

GUESTS — HOW MUCH NOTICE, HOW OFTEN, HOW LONG

PARTNERS STAYING OVER — WHAT'S NORMAL, WHAT'S TOO MUCH

QUIET HOURS

FOOD — SHARED, SEPARATE, OR BOTH? WHAT'S OFF-LIMITS?

BORROWING EACH OTHER'S THINGS

ANYTHING ELSE THAT WOULD BOTHER YOU IF IT HAPPENED

07 When it slips — the script

It will slip. Agreeing now how you'll raise it means nobody has to invent a way to do it while annoyed.

> WITHIN A FEW DAYS
> Say it early, while it's still small and boring. A week of silence turns a dish into a character judgment.

> NAME THE THING, NOT THE PERSON
> "The kitchen's been piling up this week" — not "you never do the dishes."

> ASK BEFORE YOU ASSUME
> "Is something going on, or did it just get away from you?" Usually it's the second one.

> FIX THE SYSTEM, NOT JUST THE INSTANCE
> If the same thing keeps slipping, the agreement is wrong. Change the agreement.

> ASSUME GOOD FAITH
> Almost nobody is trying to get away with anything. They forgot, or they're underwater, or their normal is different from yours.

HOW WE'VE AGREED TO BRING THINGS UP

08 Check back in

An agreement nobody revisits becomes an agreement nobody honors. Put a real date on it.

WE'LL REVIEW THIS ON

QUICK WEEKLY CHECK-IN — WHEN?

TEN MINUTES, WEEKLY

Anything coming up? Anything not working? That's the whole meeting. It sounds unnecessary right up until the month you skip it.

We agree to this

Not a contract — a record of what we decided, so nobody has to remember it.
